[CONCLUDED.]

Mr. Bacon said he would merely state, in answer to the gentleman last up, that he now understood the specific ground on which the motion was introduced, to be abandoned; and the paper called for, admitted not to be necessary to the discussion of the resolution from the senate. With respect to the resolution now before the house he differed from some of those with whom he generally was happy to act; and such differences would always exist when gentlemen acted from the impression of their own judgments, and without any secret understanding. The gentleman from N. York, (Mr. Gardiner) has defended the resolution, on the ground that the information desired was necessary for the justification of the administration. How so? No imputation had been alledged against the British government by the executive for making this third proposition; it had been simply rejected, as all admitted incorrect grounds. So far from being made the ground of any imputation against that government it was expressly ascribed to a mistake of Mr. Canning. Not to a wilful misinterpretation, but to a misapprehension of the conversation which had passed between him and Mr. Pinkney. The only blame imputed to Mr. Canning, is not that he originally proposed it, because in that instance he might have acted under a mistake, but that it was urged by him after this government had refused to listen to it. He could not even see how the paper called for was necessary for the justification of Mr. Canning; as no charge had been bro't against him on account of the proposition. No supposition had ever been uttered in nor out of the House that our minister had been authorised to assent to such a proposition, and if he had assented to it, the affair only concerned him. The administration were not concerned in it at all. Whether the nation resorted to war or not, it could not go to war on that point. It was not the subject of difference at all. He could see no reason why the paper should be called for. As to its being necessary, according to the idea of the gentleman from N. York, (Mr. Gardiner) to silence the cavillings of capricious federalists, (his own term)—which he did not mean to adopt—but as the gentleman was better acquainted with his political friends than Mr. B. he had no right to question the propriety of the character given them; if the gentleman had characterized them correctly, he did not believe any thing would be sufficient to satisfy such persons, neither could he on that ground see any reason to vote for the resolution.

Mr. KEY would not have risen to trouble the house on the question before it, if he could have viewed the subject in the same light in which it was considered by the gentleman from Ten. (Mr. Rhea.)—That gentleman seemed to suppose because Mr. Canning's letter of the 27th of May, was subsequent to the arrangement, that the communication of the instructions to Mr. Pinkney could have no bearing on the questions to be discussed. But he did not consider this to have been the first communication of the instructions. It appeared they had been communicated anterior to the date of Mr. Canning's note, for he writes at that time, "Having had the honor to read to you, in extenso the instructions, &c." He wished to know when and how Mr. Pinkney had communicated the subject of the conference to the executive; and the period at which it took place. If he correctly recollected the nature of the communication from that gentleman, he believed them to be always luminous, extremely clear, and very minute; and that he particularly detailed the periods of time and the substance of communications. Not to travel over ground occupied by other gentlemen, Mr. Key said he justified the call on the ground that the time at which the instructions were first read to Mr. Pinkney, was not known to our government.

Mr. Gardiner had just heard from the gentleman from Virginia, (Mr. Eppes) very much to his surprise that this proposition of the third condition was a matter of very trifling importance. It would seem as if he were fated to differ from the gentleman on points which concerned the real honor of the government and the country. He thought it important to be ascertained how this proposition came to be made by the British government, if it was made without any previous indication on our part to submit to it. He should, if such were the case, call it little short of an insulting proposition, as the making it necessarily implied an imputation that our government was inadequate to the purpose of carrying into effect its own laws, an imputation to which it could never submit. But the President of the U. States, in his late message to Congress, (possessing no doubt, "a view of the whole ground") to which Mr. G. could not pretend, but would endeavor to attain) had thought necessary in the face of the world, to charge the British government with perfidy in refusing to ratify an agreement entered into by its minister, having competent power to make such an agreement. This was a serious charge, which, if not repelled by the British government would attach infamy to it for ever. For what worse imputation could attach to a government, than that it should deliberately refuse to carry into effect an arrangement which it had solemnly entered into? It was therefore important, after the government had issued a kind of state paper of a higher tone than any one since the revolution, to that union which should be established if any serious consequences were to result from these events, to shew that it was right. The British government, as he understood, said that it would not carry into effect the arrangement concluded here, because their minister had not conformed to his instructions sent, but absolutely violated them, in neglecting among other things, to get the assent of the American government to stipulations, which were to allow the British navy to capture the vessels of the U. S. bound to places not permitted by their laws. Now, inasmuch as he was instructed to make this point of his arrangement, and failed to do so, the British government say they were not bound by his arrangement.

On the part of this government it appeared to have been contended that the resident minister was possessed of full powers to conclude an arrangement, and that consequently it was strictly binding. As this involved a question concerning the law of nations, which he did not altogether understand, he would not enter into its discussion now. But this was the point. If it were true that this proposition did not in fact come in the first instance from the American government, as asserted by Mr. Canning; if it should turn out that this offensive tender of the British navy to aid in the execution of the laws of the U. States, had originated in one of these little diplomatic arts which had secretly induced another government to make a degrading proposal, that our own might have the honor of indignantly rejecting it; and, if, after the British government had been so induced to make such a condition, that the United States should refuse to accede to it, then would the disgrace and the want of good faith be on the part of this government. If our minister was first authorised to propose that the British navy might capture American vessels bound to France, in contravention of our decrees, then would the British government be well justified in refusing the arrangement. He would not be understood as believing this statement of the case to be correct, but if it were, in this point of view it was decisive. He therefore considered it extremely important to ascertain in what manner the proposition had originated. He would grant that this information would not bear directly upon the subject of the resolution from the senate; but it was material to have a view of the whole ground. He would then be willing to say, if it appeared that the proposal had actually come from the American government, that it, and not the government of Great Britain, had recalled the condition proposed by itself. Until these facts were made appear, the government could not make good the charge of perfidy on the part of Great Britain. If the proposition had originated in a mistake, he wished to know what Mr. Pinkney really did say, and how Mr. Canning came to misunderstand him at all. When these things were made clear, and not until then, would either nation be willing to follow its government into a war. And for the purpose of ascertaining them, he desired to see such papers as were comprehended in the motion before the house. The question was now taken by yeas and nays, & the resolution agreed to—85 to 36.

IN SENATE.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 26.

Mr. SNOWDEN.

I want some money in these days of pecuniary distress, there has been a non-intercourse between myself and cash, since the first lay-out on The Lumbarge, as it is called by the faculty, and which is thought by many a very proper name for this commercial disease. Mr. Snowden, I have lately observed a reward of $5000 offered for producing the result given by Mr. Jackson to Mr. Secretary Smith, and I have searched, but in vain, for the Scoundrel. He is concealed, I think, somewhere in or about the Secretary of State's office; but it would be pollution to make the search there, and would be adding insult to insult upon it, that the Secretary himself, harbors this creature. I have looked through the whole of the correspondence wherein a fellow by the name of Insult indiscreetly did intrude himself, but without success. There was an inconsiderate devil of the description, who intruded and did thrust himself insolently forward, and in the face of day had the impudence to give the lie direct to Mr. Jackson! Thereby setting a bad example at the Court, and in the Cabinet of Washington. I have secured him, and have him locked up, ready to be produced, whenever the Secretary of State has the temerity to meet him face to face. As no doubt you know the residence of X. Y. Z. if you inform them of my discovery, perhaps they may reward me handsomely, as I think I merit it, for finding out his hiding place; and the concealer of such a disturber of the public peace, is equally criminal with him who gives sanctuary to a felon. Mr. Snowden, take my word for it, the plan to provoke Mr. Jackson to maintain like a man, the dignity of his Sovereign, and in so doing, to act with firm and positive language; and such as Mr. Smith should choose to take offence at; I say sir, the plan was hatched before Mr. Jackson's arrival at the City. Immediately on its being known that he was at Annapolis, Mr. Secretary Smith posted on to Monticello, where the President met him, and a Caucus was held, attended by the Philosophic Chief of that place. On that Caucus breaking up, the Chief of Monticello repaired to Richmond in Virginia, where another Caucus was held, and the head of the Editor of The Enquirer was furnished with ample materials for the subject whenever the event happened; and at these two enlightened meetings it was resolved nem. con. that the man who had been at Copenhagen, was an improper character to be sent hither, and the means were then plotted to prevent his mission having the desired effect through his exertions; so that the man himself, and not his manner or matter was the grievance & was the bone to gnaw; therefore, sir, when Mr. Jackson, in tracing the ground he was to tread, started (without the least expectation of being contradicted) that the three conditions contained in Mr. Canning's instructions to Mr. Erskine, were laid before Mr. Smith, and which he did no doubt, to begin de nova as the nothing had been done by Mr. Erskine, then the happy moment arrived, the opportunity shewed itself fair, and the Secretary of State, hugging himself that now he could shew his prowess positively told Mr. Jackson, that he was sent by the king of Great Britain, with lies or forgeries for the basis of his mission. What then is the situation of Mr. Jackson? Coming from a Country which possesses a dignity derived from an honorable maintenance of all its pretensions, at least as respectable as our own, which is yet in its cradle, and rocked by inexperienced nurses. He replies to it, not by telling Mr. Smith that his language was irrelevant and improper, that his King insulted by it, and demand his passports, of which he would have been justified in doing; but by repeating what he was instructed to know, and what Mr. Smith has acknowledged to be the fact. But an European March has no credit where the word of the Secretary of State of America is at stake. Yes sir, with all that deficiency of talent, for which Mr. Smith is not enviable, and which his best friends allow, I say with all that weakness of intellect, and novelty of the duties attached to his new situation, he is, in the deficiency of talent, for ow, I say with all this and novelty of the duties situation, he is, in the eyes of the demagogues of the day, infallible, and immaculate: and why? Because the President chose to give him a salue, there being plenty of others who can read and write for him: somewhat like Sancho Pancho, who, when he was raised to the Post of Governor of Borataria, out of gratitude to his Ass that had carried him through many a slough, he made him his Prime Minister, and appointed one of his old friends to do the duties of the office as the Ass's deputy. This anecdote is resorted to, because it is well known that Mr. Smith is incompetent to a diplomatic correspondence and that the one carried on with Mr. Jackson, was digested and sanctioned by others, before it was signed by him. The stand taken by the administration on this occasion, is a bold one, perhaps one that may work our ruin. It should be recollected, that as yet we are but a Government in an infant state, and in the tide of experiment. Until a boy is firm in his skates it is believed he should not venture upon ice covering deep water. I say it is an unprecedented step taken by the government, and although it may shew courage and energy, may amount to as much folly, as the man who first invented Gunpowder, and to try the force of it, placed himself across a barrel of it, and by boldly applying a match, blew himself into the air.

Let every good citizen banish party zeal, rally round their own interests; probe the error to the quick, remove from office those, who for factions sake, would prostrate the honor of the Country, and lay waste the happiness of its citizens, and shew to the world that we have ability and virtue enough to re-ent an error, and thus enroll ourselves in the rank of nations; otherwise by dear bought obstinacy and tenacity, we may be wise and repent too late. I have not time now for a postscript, but you shall receive it in a day or two.

A. B.

"Power" and "No Power"—Every reader of Mr. Giles's speech must have remarked the following singular passage:

"What does he tell us are his positive powers? A power merely to receive and discuss. Why, sir, every gentleman here present has that power: and indeed every lady too, sir, has the power to receive and discuss; and eventually to conclude a convention, &c. But, sir, the power merely to receive and discuss, is what is very properly called, and is in fact, no power."

One philosopher has said that mind is power; another that eloquence is power; another that wealth is power; another that truth is power; another that the sword is power; another that influence is power, &c. Now we must be convinced, upon the authority of Mr. Giles, that all powers are no powers, and this upon the old fashioned principle of believing a thing because it is impossible.

The orator has not been excessively gallant to the ladies in telling them that their power to receive and discuss proposals, and eventually to conclude a convention, is in fact no power. We much mistake, if "every lady" does not consider it an important power, and one which she would not exchange even for the laurels that bloom around the brow of Mr. Giles. The ladies, we presume, consider it a power almost equal to that which they possess in common with other "sovereigns," of "precluding abused opportunity" by dismissing an ambassador or correspondent who insults them with "gross insinuations."

NOTE.

It will be recollected that Mr. Macon called the ladies as "The real Sovereigns of the United States."

[Freeman's Journal.]

"An Inquisition."—Mr. RHEA of Tennessee says that Congress ought not to institute "an inquisition into the correctness or incorrectness of Mr. Canning's ideas." But Mr. Rhea is so refined a metaphysician, and his voice so singular, as to render it impossible for him to be understood as a public speaker, and most people in Washington are decidedly of opinion that it is in time there should be "an inquisition" to determine whether that gentleman does in fact possess any "ideas," whether "correct or incorrect," of sufficient consequence even to himself to justify the terrible dilapidations which his long and numerous speeches are continually making of the public time and treasure.

[Ibid.]

Infallible Index.—Mr. Giles says that the divisions and perplexities of the country, in the time of the embargo ought to serve as an INFALLIBLE INDEX to guide us in our present and future political course. Agreed, Demosthenes. Why then do not you and your party set about adopting an impartial and energetic system of policy, that shall put an end to all our divisions and perplexities? You manifest no disposition to be directed by your own index. No—Mr. Giles must receive, as old Solomon says in the play, "the newest news from the seat of war," before a single step can be taken at home. Nothing can be done till the eloquent Virginia senator receives advices from "Leghorn, Cape Horn, and every part of the habitable globe."

[Ibid.]

Extract of a letter, received at Philadelphia from an intelligent gentleman in London.

"All kinds of manufactures and produce now get into the continent, and Bonaparte has been obliged to wink at their introduction—Denmark has also relaxed and not only allowed the introduction of produce, &c. &c. from England, but permitted the Norwegians to bring articles to us. This week upwards of 60 vessels, direct from Norway, with timber, &c. have arrived, and 80 more are expected next week. We have also now great quantities of Russian articles, and we have shipped all kinds of manufactures in return."

A gang of desperadoes has lately been detected in a plot entered into for the purpose of seizing upon the public money on its way from Ohio to the treasury of the United States. They were prevented from carrying their project into execution by a boat accidentally falling into company with that which contained the money. Some of the rogues have been apprehended, and it is hoped the whole band will be discovered and duly punished.

[Spirit of '76.]

The marquis De Yrujo, whose appointment as minister plenipotentiary from Ferdinand 7th to the court of Brazil, has been announced some time since, has informed his Catholic majesty's consul in Boston, by letters dated Rio Janeiro, 12th Sept. of the dignified manner in which he had been received by that government, and the many polite attentions shewn him on the occasion.

(Poulson's Am.)

The governor of Gibraltar, by proclamation, dated the 22d of Sept. 1809, has announced that the importation of American tobacco is not prohibited, but the transshipment of American tobacco from American ships in the bay, for the purpose of carrying on a contraband trade with the coast of Spain is prohibited.

(Ibid.)

Official accounts from the north of Spain dated early in Oct. state, that "the kingdom of Navarre was then in a state of general insurrection against the French—a person by the name of Robles had performed prodigies of valor against them—a plan had been laid for taking Pampeluna, but the French discovered it and put a number of persons to death. The patriotic cause was taking strong root—Biscay, and in general all went on well. In Biscay they had captured 84 French horsemen, with their captain, guided by the famous traitor Amoros, a great friend of Godoy, who was immediately beheaded. Near Ciudad Rodrigo, the patriots had taken the French battering trains and marshal Ney, who calculated on besieging that city, has been completely beaten."

VIRGINIA LEGISLATURE.

The committee of propositions and grievances have, according to order, had under their consideration a petition to them referred, and have come to the following resolution thereupon:

This coming president hunting Creek that an act may pass for capital stock of said company, and authorizing them to make a turnpike road from the southern abutment of the Hunting creek bridge, to the ford of Dogue run, on the present stage road, in the county of Fairfax, is reasonable.

NORFOLK, Dec. 20.

Last night arrived in Hampton Roads the ship Justina, capt. Howe, 38 days from Liverpool. We understand she brings London dates to the 9th Nov. but we have not been so fortunate as to obtain any, altho' the usual exertions were made. From the passengers we learn that except the articles of the treaty between France and Austria, they are entirely destitute of interest. General Reubell and family are among the passengers: Nov. 19th, lat. 49, 20, long. 17, 30, was boarded by the French national brig Geniris, capt. Lagrave, 7 weeks from Norway. Detained the ship two hours, and probably would have destroyed her, had it not been for the female passengers—on this occasion no one will deny but that French gallantry superceded French injustice. The capt. of the brig informed capt. H. that his instructions were to destroy every American vessel from British ports, and that he had captured 16 during his cruise. Previous to capt. L's permission for the Justina to proceed on her voyage, capt. Howe was obliged to pledge his honor that in the event of his falling in with a British cruiser, he would not intimate any thing relative to the Geniris. Capt. Howe supplied the brig with fresh provisions.

Funkerton's Collection of Voy- ages and Travels.

Forming a complete History of the Origin and Progress of Discovery by Sea and Land, from the most authentic Sources.

THE first number of this valuable Work has just come to hand and is ready for inspection at the store of the subscriber, in King street, and with Mr. Triplett, at the coffee-house.

Fully aware of the impositions that have been practised upon the public by strangers soliciting subscriptions from distant places; the Editors invite their examination of a Work perhaps the most useful, entertaining as well as extensive in its kind that has ever been undertaken in any country. And they flatter themselves that the American will by no means shrink from a comparison with the London edition, tho' offered at six dollars per Vol. less.

This number may be considered as a fair specimen of the execution of the work, and will be left a short time for examination, before the 2d number is put to press. After this the subscription will be raised to $2 25 each number; and but a few more copies printed than are sufficient to supply the subscribers, that the early patrons of this valuable Work may have a decided advantage—subsequent applications may therefore come too late.

It is also the intention of the Editors to annex to the last number a complete list of the names of the subscribers, as the patrons and encouragers of useful knowledge, the arts and literature of the United States.

Dr. Jebb's Nature's Restorative,

A BALSAMIC CORDIAL.

THIS cordial so justly celebrated throughout Great-Britain and the continent of Europe, for its superior efficacy in the curing all disorders excited by nervous irritability, as well as in complaints of complete debility, whether arising from irregularities of living long continued residence in warm climate, intemperate pursuits of excessive pleasures or that destructive habit of inconsiderate youth which brings on so prematurely the injur-ties of old age.

In removing pulmonary affections, asthma and all disorders of the lungs, it is the most powerful remedy ever yet found, and the relief it has afforded even in the last stage of consumptions, is without a parallel; with regard to its efficacy in this baneful, and unfortunately the prevailing disorder in this country (consumption) its superiority is such as to have supplanted every other medicine.

Those who in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, will find themselves restored to health and strength, and all those melancholy symptoms removed, which are the general effects of such causes.

In short, animated by the uniform success this invaluable cordial has experienced in Europe, the thousands it has renovated, when bending under the pressure of nervous, consumptive or hypochondriacal disorders (many tested proofs of which from eminently distinguished persons in this quarter of the globe, are now in the possession of the proprietor here, some few of which are herein published have determined the introduction of it into this continent, where its efficacies must soon become so prized as to make it considered a beneficent remedy not to be dispensed with by those who are anxious to preserve or acquire their health.

The chief ingredient of this cordial is a pant whose rare and precious salutary virtues were well known to the Arabians during the 8th and 9th centuries, when that people shone conspicuous over all the nations of the world for their learning and skill in eradicating baneful diseases incident to the human frame, renovating infirmity to vigor, and restoring the sickly to sound and rosy health, and which, as known at this time by their descendants, and used and experienced as the most sovereign remedy for decayed constitutions, and every species of nervous disorders. This celebrated restorative plant has also been highly estimated for ages past, amongst the most enlightened nations of Greece, and considered by those wise inhabitants as one of the first of their blessings.

This cordial is also rich and fine in flavor most grateful to the palate, and the most enlivening to the spirits of any yet offered to the public.

Dr. Tissot's celebrated Gout and Rheu- matic Drops

(Price, Two Dollars per bottle.)

NOTHING is of more importance than the preservation of health—this common faced fact is too often forgotten whilst we are active and strong—and prevention of pain, which is superior to its cur-is not sufficiently attended to by any descrip-on of persons. Among those disorders which require the most early and unremitting effort to eradicate and overcome, none have a stronger claim upon our notice than the Gout, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Weakness of the Joints, Sprains, Gleet, the Stone and Gravel, the Cramp and every species of Rheumatic Pains from whatever cause they may have originated—and hence every relief which can be administered is too valuable to be forgotten.— Those persons whose avocations peculiarly expose them to colds, &c. cannot be too anxious always to possess immediate aid. Sea-faring persons, travellers, &c. ought constantly to carry with them that medicine which will counteract the unpleasant effects of their per-ious duties, and especially those pains to which their situation must expose them. To those who reside in or visit the West-Indies, and other warm climates, they will be found upon trial to convey the most lasting service and will gradually destroy all tendency to disease in the human frame, and preserve health and vigor. Although a great variety of prescriptions have been published to cure the disorders enumerated above, none has yet equalled the GOUT AND RHEUMATIC DROPS of Dr. TISSOT, which are celebrated throughout the European continent, and whose unbounded benefits are fully authenticated by certificates already published of gentlemen so well known in America, being of the first consequence in the state of Maryland: General Charles Ridgely, of Hampton; John Gibson, Esq. one of the directors of the Farmers' Bank of Maryland; John Macubbin, Esq. Mrs. Macubbin, his wife; and Mrs. Ryan, of Calton.
Ample certificates and affidavits of the beneficial effects of these medicines may be seen by applying as above.

For Sale.

The following VALUABLE PROPERTY.

A TRACT OF LAND.

CONTAINING 1600 acres, more or less, called and known by the name of Dunloe Marsh, lying within 12 miles of Winchester, in the county of Frederick, in the state of Virginia. On about 900 acres of this tract there are several very well improved farms tenanted for life or lives, the balance of the all incumbrance, including an excellent im-chan; mill built with stone, the whole yielding an annual rent of about 800 dollars. Much of this tract is very fertile, well watered, and all abundance of timber. It is generally well ing, but part of it is hilly and stony, chiefly of lime stone. It will be laid off to suit purchasers.

Another tract, called Hollis Marsh, lying in the county of Westmoreland, containing about 2800 acres, bordering on the river Potomac, adjoining the Stratford estate and the late residence of Richard Lee, esq., Chantilly. On the estate are a number of farms and tenants at will. Part of this tract is extremely fertile, and all of it as good as the lands generally are in that part of the country. The Marsh affords excellent range for stock, and is happily situated for fish and fowls of which that river abounds, and must be a desirable estate to any person who may choose to reside in that part of the country.
It will however be laid off to suit purchasers.
The above lands are held by deeds of purchase duly recorded in the general court.

Another tract containing 900 acres, lying in the county of Berkeley, adjoining the residence of Raleigh Colston, esq., of which about 600 acres is leased for the balance of the life of an aged man, the rest retained at will. This land is situate in what is called the big bend of Potomac, and borders on it. In point of fertility it is esteemed superior to none in that part of the state and is held by deed from James Marshall, esq.

Seven other tracts containing 1000 acres each, adjoining each other in the county of Mason, within a few miles of the Ohio, between the two Kanawha's on the waters of Sandy Creek, which runs through a considerable part of it. It adjoins the land of general Washington, and the late Benjamin Harrison, jun. esq. A large portion of it is rich bottom and the upland of very good quality. It is held under the original patent by deeds duly recorded in the general court.

Five full & complete Shares in the Dismal Swamp Company.

Upwards of 16,000 acres of Lands, being very old military rights, lying in the states of Ohio, Kentucky and the Indiana territory, chiefly patented in my own name and ready to be shewn.

A more particular description of the foregoing property may be seen by applying to Mr. Thomas Taylor, of Richmond, who is authorized to make contracts, or to myself in Alexandria. The titles are all undoubted and the terms proposed are, one fourth in cash at the time of conveyance, the balance in three instalments, the last two to be of interest from the date. Any species of the public stock and of the different Banks in the United States of Insurance Companies—the Potomac Bridge and Turnpike Companies will be received in payment according to their fair value. Ground rents in the city of Richmond and town of Alexandria, in Houses and Lots, will likewise be received in payment according to such rates as may be agreed upon.
